Over 500 students and a dozen organizations attended the event, held in partnership with the Suffolk County Department of Labor. The concept of hosting a job fair for teenagers was generated from the Youth Leadership Caucus students, who meet regularly to identify and address needs and issues facing today's youth. Members were on hand to assist and direct student attendees.

"I would like to thank the Brentwood School District as well as the businesses and organizations who participated in the job fair," said Presiding Officer Gregory. "The overwhelming turnout should serve as a clear indicator to employers that teenagers across Suffolk County want to work. I hope more companies will provide opportunities for students who are seeking employment."
